

When Everything Feels Urgent

The 2-Minute Mental Reset

When your brain feels loud and you don't know what to do first, use this 5-step process to get clear fast.

1

Get Everything Out

What to do: Say or write everything on your mind—bills, tasks, worries, all of it. Don't: Organize or prioritize it.

→ Messy is perfect. Just get it out of your head.

2

What Actually Matters Today?

Ask yourself: Out of everything I just said, what actually matters today? Not: This week or eventually. Just today.

→ Pick one thing. That's your focus.

3

What Can Wait?

Ask yourself: What feels urgent—but isn't actually important right now? Do this: Name it, then set it aside.

→ You're not ignoring it. You're choosing not to carry it today.

4

One Small Next Step

Ask yourself: What's the smallest next step that moves the thing that matters forward? Not: The whole plan. Just one step.

→ Example: 'Pull something out of the freezer for dinner.' That's enough.

5

That's Enough

Remember: You don't need to figure everything out today. You just needed: A place to start. And now you have it.

→ The rest can wait.

You can come back to this anytime your brain feels overloaded.